Does your utility have these problems?

- Data scattered across databases & spreadsheets
- Increasing joint use attachments
- Difficulty following up on inspections
- Problems coordinating with pole attachers or owners
- Increasing inspection regulations
- Retiring workers

Varasset is a proven product, implemented in utilities across the country. With highly configurable workflows, fields and user interface layout, Varasset easily adapts to the specific needs of your utility.

Integrated system – Utilities often receive spreadsheets, small databases or shape files from inspectors. Importing data into the utility's systems and following up on the findings can be difficult. Varasset's one-touch, automated synchronization means:

- Inspectors follow your standards
- Inspection data is immediately available
- Inspectors immediately see asset updates
- You can oversee and assure data quality

Varasset easily interfaces with your systems:

- GIS
- Work management
- Finance
- NJUNS (also developed by Accent)

Fluid workforce management – put your own employees to work on inspections and corrections during slow periods, and use contractors when needed.

Accent is a software development company specializing in utilities. We use cutting-edge technologies to develop and maintain rock-solid software. We are not an inspection company selling other services.

From our utility customers:

"We increased our joint use attachment revenue by over $100,000 per year after we implemented and got everything working."

"Now we run quick reports to prove to the Public Services Commission that we're doing safety inspections and making corrections. That used to be a real problem."

"A utility our size should have three or four people managing joint use. This software is the only reason I can handle it by myself, with just a part-time intern helping."

"The Accent guys really understand our industry. They listen and work with us."

From an independent inspection company:

"The software never crashes and loses our data like the old software did. It makes it a lot easier to work with the utility because the upload and download is all automatic."
